The Bakers Dozen

A full-length play, written and produced by a local award-winning playwright which features retired Military Veterans; both on stage and in real-life.

Terry is a food critic for a local newspaper in a rural community who has been assigned to The Bakers Dozen doughnut shop to write a review. He finds himself surrounded by retired military veterans who frequent the shop every weekend to talk about the good old days. As he enjoys his Boston Crème and coffee in comfort, two boys show up and attempt to commit an armed robbery. What follows is a surprising turn of events which serves to remind us all that age should not be mistaken as vulnerability, and sweetness does not always come with cream and sugar.

The Bakers Dozen is a full length play written, and directed (with a little technical support from a few of the vets) by Becky Kimsey; the daughter of a Vietnam Veteran who was most impressed by the man her father became, as a result of his military experience. She wanted to share and highlight some of those facets veterans have that may not be obvious and visible to the common audience; hence, “The Bakers Dozen”. Becky is an accomplished playwright having successfully written and directed the show “Gladys Nights” at another Treasure Valley theatre last spring. The play was often sold out; it won several awards (including Best Production) and has since been picked up by a national publishing company.
